Farewell Performances of the Allen Players at Empire Theatre

At the matinée and evening performances this evening at the New Empire, the Allen Players will say an adieu to Edmonton theatre-goers. For 12 weeks this popular dramatic stock company, under the direction of F. R. Allen, has held sway at two local theatres, the New Empire and the New Empire, setting a record that has seldom been equalled on the stage here. While it is to be wished the shows have been uniformly well received, the Allen Players' "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" has met with the approval of the big audience which has seen the performance. There are still a few matinée and evening performances this week, today and tomorrow, and reservations can be made at the two offices. Mr. Allen and his company of Allen Players will tour west to Vancouver and Victoria, and return to Edmonton before resuming operations next autumn. At 11th Avenue, wishes the Allen Players a safe and happy summer before their return to their "home" town.

Pantages

Another Vaudeville Success

While lighting may not hit twice to the same place, it is interestingly enough that it does in the vaudeville world for Alex Pantages, following up the success of "The Royal Divorce," his "Divorce Show," which scored an unequalled triumph last week. The current program is one that will satisfy the most exacting critics. It is a "holiday mood" like Edmonton is this week, and it is the spirit of the general carnival spirit that pervades the capital city.

The program on the bill is held by Benny Barton's revue, and the stars of the show, as the performers are all to the mustard. The cast includes such well-known personalities as George Grossmith, Bertie, Belle and Lillian Dyer, and the girls of the "Royal Divorce" de jour de jazz, admirably suited to the latest pants. The synopses of the acts are brief, but the program is designed to keep the audience interested to change away dull care.

Newcomers to the stage are the vaudevillians and Leo Gerilla, a trio of Songs from "A Royal Divorce," a British production, the attraction at the Allen theatre all this week.

Canadian performers are bound to become great favorites locally. They are added attractions of this week's program, and the audience will be singing, dancing and some out-of-the-way things.

Another added attraction is provided by Way Dalton and Jane Cowl, who are to repeat their "Cinderella Lamp," a triumph of stagecraft, music, dancing, singing and singing and dancing mingled with comedy.

An interesting program of comedy and topical songs is provided by G. B. Samuelson and Company, two of vaudeville's best liked performers. Cromwell and Co. offer a program of comedy and topical novelties, joining the Pantages circuit after a successful European tour.

Afternoon and evening performances and matinees will be given. Prices and reservations can be made in advance for any of the evening performances. The price of the wedding of Marie Louise, the proud daughter of the Queen, was a special matinee for children.

WELCH ACCEPTS CHALLENGES TO RACE

Exhibition Assn. Hangs Up $500 Purse For the Event

Many Thrills in Second Racing Program

Helman Captures Edmonton Derby

Jockey Carroll Suspended for Thirty Days for Foul Riding—Despite Heavy Track Races Showed Vast Improvement Over Opening Day—Helman Paid $128 on a $5 Ticket

A few surprises, many thrilling races with close finishes, a noisy but light, heavy wagering on the jumbo track, and a general atmosphere of fun made the best crowd of the race meet up to the promise of the first day's racing at the exhibition grounds. Despite the condition of the track, which was not up to par with the opening day, the constancy of glue and in other respects the track showed great improvement over the opening program.

The second program was late being finished. On the opening day it was the same. It was the fact that the programs had not been out long enough to attract the public for the first race. However, the excitement was there, and the horses in which they were handled more than made up for the delay while you could see the enthusiasm of four-fifths of the crowd left before the start.

Carroll Suspended

Jockey Carroll, riding Madoka in the first race, was suspended for 30 days by Helman, who was won by him. In the second race he was suspended for 30 days for foul riding.

Madoka, who had been running lunched during almost the entire time, Carroll interfered with Prairie, and Prairie fell. Carroll was called to the stand.

The two attempted an exchange of blows, but the referee held them off and attempted to continue it in the cellars, but the stand was closed for the next day when it was announced.

Before the program started the public was asked to leave the track.

Last night they received notice that the horses would not be run again until they returned to work.

However, eventually the machines were cleaned and put back in shape.

On Saturday the opening event with China Jane a close second and Bill Spinks third. The field was not up to par, but the track was. Watering got the win by a neck, and the race was a bit unexpected following his race yesterday when she weighed in at 110 lbs., while the others were on a dry track. The heavy rain, however, failed to affect her to any great extent.

The Derby

Edelman came as a surprise of the day. She captured the second race and half $128 on a $5 ticket. The first race was won by Helman, who was won by him in the race that got him suspended.

The field was a different one to the first race, and the horses, after a few runs, were in top form.

REVOLUTION IN NOVA SCOTIA

President Lewis has called off the Nova Scotia strike, so far as the U.M.W.A. is concerned. By arbitration action the chief executive has abolished "district 26" dethroned its officers and made provisional arrangements whereby those members who wish to maintain their standing in the union will be enabled and required to obey its instructions and go back to work. The strike is thus abolished by abolishing the authority of the strike-makers. These and those who follow them are now outlaws, can claim no support from the union, and are entitled to expect none from other trades organizations.

The communication in which this action is announced, and the reasons for it set forth, is an illuminating one. Briefly, Mr. Lewis says that what has been called a strike in the far eastern province is really a revolutionary movement, engineered by violent radicals acting in obedience to instructions from Moscow, and carried on in direct violation of a working contract entered into by its authors and their associates with the British Empire Steel corporation. From this breaking of contract, and also from the attempt to overthrow constituted authority under pretense of conducting a strike, he dissociates the international organization, adding character sketches of the ringleaders in the movement which are apparently truthful and decidedly frank.

In the light of his observations and summary of the course of events it cannot be claimed that Mr. Lewis has acted with precipitation. He could as well have taken this present action weeks ago, upon the evidence contained in his announcement. That he deferred doing so has made the U.M.W.A. at least for that period a party to the deliberate derision of its contractual obligations and to a movement of known Bolshevik purposes. The delay suggests that the president is acting now with a view to saving the face of his organization rather than from concern for the fulfillment of the contract, the preservation of order, and the suppression of rebellion. Messrs. Livingstone and McLachlin are no worse now than he knew them to be when they launched the so-called strike, the contract is no more plainly broken, and the public authority no more flagrantly defied.

This definition of the character and purpose of the strike and its leaders is the final response to those who have been protesting against the employment of troops to preserve order and permit the operation of the mines and steel plants. It comes from a man whose business it is to know whereof he speaks. When he is familiar with the "constant intrigue" between the strike-promoters and the soviet at Moscow, and that the present outbreak is only an attempt at revolution carried out under disguise, he leaves a good many Canadian trades councils in the position of having to explain what they meant by demanding that the soldiers be taken out of the troubled area. If what has been going on in Cape Breton was a revolution, or an attempted revolution, then the plain duty of the government, dominion and provincial, to employ whatever means of force is necessary to protect life and property, suppress the uprising and bring the leaders to swift account. Any movement that is too radical for the U.M.W.A. to be associated with is too dangerous to be allowed to gain headway.

The open declaration of a man of the "inside," and one who has to answer for what he says, that Moscow is still promoting revolutionary efforts in Canada is one which should get more passing attention from the public. The general strike in the west a few years ago owed its inspiration to the same source. Doubtless the agitators both in the west and in the east have been drawing their funds from the place where they get their theories of government. Because Canada is a long way from Russia, and because the war has been over for five years, it is not to be assumed that bolshevism is a remote or a past menace. Mr. Lewis says otherwise. He is in a position to know. And it would be fatal to him to say so unless he does know.

This official representation of the situation at Sydney does more than assert the relationship of the U.M.W.A. to events there. It also places Messrs. Livingstone and McLachlin in line for some immediate and pressing attention at the hands of the provincial and dominion authorities. Three men have been spending edition for months off and on, in a way that showed them to be either danger promoters of sedition or blackhearts. They have now, upon the evidence of patent facts, confirmed by the calculated declaration of Mr. Lewis, carried their ideas into action and embarked upon the "mad venture" of trying to make themselves the Lenin and Trotsky of one of the provinces. It is high time that they were rounded up and an end made to their mischievous activities. Not to put it too bluntly, unless Mr. Lewis has maligned them and unless the obvious facts of the situation do not count for anything, these gentlemen should be locked up.

A PECCULAR COMBINATION

The survivors of the fray have chosen Mr. Drury as leader of the U.F.O. opposition in the new legislature of Ontario. As the bolters who deserted him during the recent session were all eliminated at the elections, the ex-premier will be free to pursue his "broaderening" policy without fear of provoking a mutiny. Doubtless his aim will be to bring about a fusion of his followers with the handful of Liberals who got elected. The prospect of that, however, is not altogether bright. The Liberal leader was defeated and his party wrecked mainly because it was suspected that he was steering a course toward coalition with the Druryites. Presumably the Liberals who secured election were mainly those who were known to be against such a merger, and they are not likely to welcome the advances of Mr. Drury at the peril of running counter to the prevailing sentiment among the voters. As government supporters will occupy seventy-six out of one hundred and eleven seats in the house it will make little practical difference for the time whether the two oppositions decide to act individually or collectively. While it will have a strong party government, Ontario is rather likely to continue to have a group legislature. How the arrangement will work out is doubtful. Too large a government majority does not make for careful and efficient administration, and a weak or divided opposition tends in the same direction. Ontario, having both, will be lucky if its business is handled with regard to economy and results.

THE BRANCH LINES DEBATE

Uncommon Sense

By John Lake

FOG BOUND.

Standing on the shore of a harbor, the fisherman can bear the hoots and shrieks of steamboats whistling blowing their way in and out of the harbor.

On the bridge of every boat is a fog horn, and the fisherman, valuing only to peer through the blanket that hangs about him, can hear the fog horn speed ahead.

The master is sure that his vessel is safe.

In a fog no lightning supplies better warning, lighting for helm only warn of danger without really realizing it.

But the curse of the sea on the open ocean or in the landlocked harbor.

Gates may be weathered if there is a fog, but gates are not built to stand in a fog.

Great waves can be ridden safely over even sudden and violent cyclonic storms can be got through reasonably.

For the fog means blindness. The master of the ship, though an experienced sailor, cannot see further into it than the lamp of the cabin.

The fisherman, who has been fishing on the sea for years, and completed the circuit of the world, sees the port of safety.

He is very certain that the West is deprived of certain lines which are unused, needed.

Most of the branches have been removed and some ends have been laid out and in some cases work commenced upon them. The territory to be eventually served by them has been filled up with the land lubbers, clutching the map and the compass, and the fisherman, who has been fishing on the sea for years, and completed the circuit of the world, sees the port of safety.

They have been waiting for years, and completed the circuit of the world, sees the port of safety.

It is like starting out to build a new life somewhere.

It is like suddenly carrying out the plans that were made, and the completion of work that was done, and the completion of work that was done.

But the fisherman, who has been fishing on the sea for years, and completed the circuit of the world, sees the port of safety.
